The AMDA .Q: Domain Driven Design model inheritance "goes wild" I have a "RollingFileLog" class which basically represents all kind of rolling log files. The problem is it is being used as a base class for another class that manages "web services". So I don't really want to have a web-services class and then inherit it, because these classes should represent different abstractions/domains. A: You should probably use a composition instead, then composition is a good fit here because its associated with abstractions. A: It's almost always useful to use abstract base class, and then you only inherit it. If you have inheritance tree, choose common base class to remain static structure, don't take any advantage of polymorphism. Ovarian stimulation by pituitary gonadotrophs. Although it is accepted that pituitary gonadotrophs have the ability to respond directly to gonadal hormones, many aspects of their regulation are still obscure. In the first part of this review, we evaluate our current knowledge on the stimulatory effect of gonadal steroids on the gonadotrophs of the anterior pituitary gland. Different non-steroidal trophic hormones that affect the gonadotrophs in an autocrine/paracrine fashion are also briefly discussed. In the second part of this review we try to give some explanation to the frequently observed considerable time delay between the ovulation-inducing hormone and the ova-shedding peak of LH, which often lasts for several days after the initial surge, and explain why pregnancy results in an elevation of LH levels over several weeks, even in cases where ovulation has taken place only 24-36 h before. We believe that by analyzing in detail the expression of specific gonadotrophin messenger RNA's in a series of animal models in which ovulation can be induced by pituitary/gonadal hormones and different agents, we will be able to unravel the still obscure molecular mechanisms involved in the induction of pituitary gonadotrophin surges.Q: Dynamically change the HTML string of a textview using a button in android I'm developing an application where I'm trying
