The aim of this study was to identify risk factors for recurrent venous thromboembolism, cancer and fatal cardiovascular disease (CVD) after initial deep venous thrombosis (DVT). We performed a retrospective cohort study of 283 272 subjects with the first ever diagnosis of DVT during 2001-2006 in Sweden. Of these, 2258 (0.8%) had a recurrent DVT during 2006-2008. Data on previous comorbidities, anticoagulation therapy, and the date of DVT were collected from medical charts. Information on cancer and fatal CVD was obtained from the Swedish National Patient Register, Cause of Death Register and Cancer Register, respectively. During a median follow-up of 16 months (interquartile range 6-27), of all recurrent DVTs, 963 (3.6%) had a subsequent CVD. Of these, 518 (2.2%) died from CVD, and 385 (1.8%) had a cancer. In crude and adjusted analyses, patients with a recent history of DVT had increased risk of subsequent CVD [hazard ratio (HR) 1.62; 95% confidence interval 1.52-1.72], and a significant excess risk was also observed for patients with cancer (HR 2.56; 1
