We were one of the first microbreweries in the country to be carbon neutral. The creation of our own Harvest Moons in 2015 gave us a taste of the ongoing challenge of local production and distribution. Our Spring Solstice Ale is well on its way to becoming a signature brew. A Farmhouse Ale, it is named in honor of the season's celebration of the lengthening of the day as we begin the emerging growth season on our farm. San Michele is a group of small businesses working together, striving for energy independence and energy conservation. In particular, this group encourages us to think beyond the business, to see the larger picture. It was Steve who pointed out that we use solar power to produce steam for the brewery. While we are pleased we can support the quality of life for our employees, we are also delighted that we can do our part in preserving the environment. Our location in St. Louis not only provides us with the ability to operate with energy independence, but also provide employment to those with whom we serve. We drink our own beer, and are making the St. Louis community better. This may seem far away, but it is not as if we are very far removed from our production. We can only produce so much beer and can only make so much beer a year. Much of that beer is sent on to other cities, which also consume their own beer. So each of us is doing our
