I found following helpfull post: (Disclaimer: I am not affiliated to the author, just found it very helpful) Within this post there is a reference to a Interceptor in the manager that is quite easy to config in a classic WSO2 solution. My question: In a WSO2-ESB environment (version 4.5) can this Interceptor be applied? Is there any difference when configuring it for HTTP, HTTPS and also from within an application call (with ESB Client API)? A: Yes you can apply it in WSO2 ESB 4.5 and you can use a custom esb client to access your API by overriding the following method of WSO2 ESB Transport Client to call your application (you can see this method while debugging wso2 esb) public TransportClient call(String uri, String method, Map> headers, change their relationship to anesthetic monitors. In this method they establish and use a shared consciousness, which allows the anesthesiologist and monitor to become a team. This method can be used to help patients and anesthesiologists establish a safe, cooperative atmosphere for intraoperative patient care. Since anesthesiologists are generally conditioned to respond to alarms in an "error-reaction," manner, it is necessary to re-condition anesthesiologists to respond to alerts as an opportunity to perform a quality-improvement review of patient care. This method allows a patient to observe the anesthesiologist responding to the monitor alarms, showing that he or she is a team member. FILED NOT FOR PUBLICATION MAR 30 2012 MOLLY C.
