The Oracle Exalogic 7.2 is designed to do more than just support Oracle Database. The new version of the database appliance integrates Exalogic with Oracle Fusion Middleware applications such as PeopleSoft, Siebel, Application Server, and Oracle Applications. Exalogic also integrates with the other Oracle products through its integration with Oracle Enterprise Manager. All of this is done through a new, simplified setup model that can be done quickly and easily. By using Exalogic as an Oracle Database appliance, the Oracle Database 12.2 can be accessed by many different client applications, and the Oracle Database cluster is configured to optimize your database for the type of workload. In this Oracle Exalogic Elastic Cloud for Oracle Database release, you can scale your Exalogic cluster to any size you require, but you'll only pay for what you use. The system includes an Amazon Web Services (AWS) instance and Amazon Glacier, which makes it easy to manage your data in the cloud. The Oracle Exalogic 7.2 can run on a 64-bit Intel Xeon Scalable processor, with up to 32TB of memory and 1,572GB of storage. As per the Oracle Software Technical Support Policies document, Troubleshooting section, as a migration path, if upgrading to newer Java versions is not possible, you may have to migrate to a newer operating system (Windows Vista, Windows 7, or Windows 8.1), application, database, framework, and/or hardware platform configuration. You may also have to re-install the application and/or database. This is a policy violation but a lot of users don't know they are on a violation & even when I asked them after a couple of years, I could get no response from them. In this case, the mobile user is to use the Web Viewer version of the Application & Desktop version of the Application. If the user generates R12x iViewer logs, we can see the IP from where the connection is made. We have to restrict Java to Desktop/Browser only.
