The Spot Healing Brush is one of the biggest image-editing tools. It can detect problems like over-saturated colors, torn or scratched images, bad lighting, dark areas, and other problems. With just a few clicks of a button, the Spot Healing Brush can organize and fix these issues so your images can continue to look better and better. What It Does: The Clone Stamp allows you to duplicate an area of an image, creating a perfect clone of wherever you place your cursor. The History Panel tells you what areas of your image have been cloned, so you can quickly restore an area if you accidentally delete it. The Puppet Warp tool lets you create a warp effect, which warps selected or entire images to a desired alignment. The Paint Bucket tool is great for objects, or for filling the background—but what if you want to select an area of an image for example? The magic tool that lets you do that is called the Magic Wand. The Magic Wand allows you to select the largest area of like-color on your image, and paint over it with your desired color. You can also use the Refine Edge tool to refine your selections and the Eraser tool for the finer details. Using the Content-Aware tool, you can change images to fit the style of images around them. The Content-Aware tool analyzes the pixels around an image to determine if the pixels should be changed to look more like the surrounding pixels. For example, the Darken tool darkens shadows and the Lighten tool lightens highlights. e3d0a04c9c

Adobe used to let you work on raw images in the editor, but that's gone. You'll need to convert your images to the JPEG format first. But the benefits of working in the Elements editor are great when it comes to working on RAW images. Adobe Scout (Essential update coming in 2021) will bring Adobe's powerful AI-powered search and technology with it. With screenshot tagging, face recognition, or facial recognition, you can find any images you've taken, even ones you've tagged, and enjoy the convenience of quick-access keyword search. It's an ideal way to gain an understanding of your images to see which ones you might want to keep or discard.
